

Abstract:

The sum-product phenomenon captures the idea that additive and multiplicative structures cannot coexist in a finite set. In this introductory talk, I will describe this problem, mentioning some things that we do know, and many more that we do not. The talk will emphasise recent progress that can be made using elementary techniques, and in particular the "squeezing" method.